

PICTORIAL POST CARDS (viewcards)

Welcome to another exciting aspect of Newfoundland collectibles — PICTURE POST CARDS.

Privately printed postcards depicting Newfoundland scenes are an aspect of Newfoundlandia that has grown considerably in popularity. Part of their appeal is the nostalgia they inspire for life at the turn of the century, the late Victorian era when cards were introduced. Their heyday was during the Edwardian era which saw that the majority of cards were issued and sold.

An exhilarating passage through time is featured on these pictorial postcards from Newfoundland and Labrador. Since 1901, there have been over 4500 images of very picturesque scenes on postcards that portray diverse life styles, work and commerce, individuals, architecture, icebergs... and most importantly, panoramic views of hundreds of communities. Together they encompass an encyclopedic pictorial survey of the heritage of the Dominion of Newfoundland.

Picture postcards initially sold in Newfoundland were from the Water Street store of S.E. Garland. However, Ayre and Sons, Limited was Newfoundland's prolific vendor. From 1901 - 1949 they produced over 1,000 different images on cards. The Newfoundland merchants had their cards made in Belgium, England, France, Germany, with art work or photographs supplied by the firm placing the order.

Most of the photographs that were used came from cameras of S.H. Parsons and Professor Holloway. Both had flourishing photographic studios in St. John's. Approximately twenty other photographers helped provide the remaining views. Most picture postcards were issued and sold in the years 1904 - 1913, the heyday of picture postcards. During World War I and the 1930's their numbers declined.

We have intentionally not priced picture postcards. Our belief is that prices are too variable. The perceived value for a picture postcard depends on: presence of a specific stamp paying the postal rate, thematic topic being portrayed, message, cancellations, mint or used state, and general overall condition. However, a selling range of $4 - $10 is often seen on mint cards made by Peco (they are modern era). Other producers generally retail $12 - $35 for mint cards. Postal rated cards often sell at 40% more.

We are grateful for the opportunity to have viewed three 'hugeous' collections formed by Willis Whalen, W. John Butt, Alison and Richard Moulton. Thank you. And thanks to the many collectors who spot those unlisted cards.

To the authors' knowledge this catalogue is the first to create such a listing of Newfoundland's pictorial postcards or picture viewcards.

The Walsh Newfoundland Specialized Stamp Catalogue Numbers are the Arabic numerals preceding each listing in the Picture Post Card section. These numbers belong to Walsh Newfoundland Specialized Stamp Catalogue.
